Court-martial

A general court-martial panel of five officers convicted a 52nd Fighter Wing airman Saturday of several offenses, including assault and battery, conspiracy and robbing a local bank.

Airman Kenyatta D. Jackson, assigned to the 52nd Logistics Support Squadron, pleaded guilty to the charge of robbing the Herforst Raiffeisenbank of 35,000 DM at knife point on June 20.

Jackson pleaded not guilty to the charge of conspiring to rob the bank with another military member and to an unrelated charge of assault and battery. The assault and battery charge stemmed from a fight at the Kastel discotheque involving German nationals in April.

The court-martial panel entered findings of guilty on both charges.

Jackson is sentenced to reduction to the rank of airman basic, forfeiture of all military pay and allowances, a dishonorable discharge from military service, and confinement for twelve years and four months.

The action becomes final upon the approval of the convening authority, Maj. Gen. Kenneth W. Hess, 3rd Air Force commander.

Force protection

In a force protection initiative, a contractor will apply shatter resistant film to all windows in the Bitburg housing units. The project starts Monday in buildings 10 and 11. The project is expected to be completed in July.

Residents will be informed of when the contractor is scheduled to begin working in their buildings. An adult resident must be home during contractor hours to allow workers access to the unit. Call Airman 1st Class Nathan Jaworski at 453-6141 for details.

Security forces compete at Lackland

Thirteen security forces teams from U.S. Air Force major commands worldwide and the British Royal Air Force Regiment are competing at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, for the 19th annual Defender Challenge security forces competition, which started Oct. 29 and runs through Saturday.

Four members of the 52nd Security Forces Squadron compete with the U.S. Air Forces in Europe Defender Challenge team. Those representing the wing are Capt. Matthew Wadd, Staff Sgt. J.T. Hawk, who are competing for the second year in a row, and newcomers Senior Airman Armando Daniel and Airman 1st Class Gregory Littlejohn.

Defender Challenge 2000 pits "the best of the best" defenders in head-to-head team competition in the craft and tools of their trade — physical fitness, weapons employment and tactics, said competition officials. The competition, which was first held as a marksmanship contest in 1952, was modified to an Olympics-style series of events in 1981 and has grown ever since.

Each major command holds a competition from defenders at its own bases to produce a single command team, which then trains and prepares for the worldwide Defender Challenge competition. Teams consist of eight primary members, a team captain, a coach and one alternate team member.

In Defender Challenge 2000, teams compete in:

Residents should take steps to reduce lead content in water

Water samples recently collected from Spangdahlem base housing by the 52nd Aerospace Medical Squadron Bioenvironmental Engineering Flight contained levels of lead over the Environmental Protection Agency and Final Governing Standard-Germany action level for lead in water. Twenty five percent of 20 homes sampled had levels that exceeded this standard. Results of tests performed at Bitburg before the water system was turned over to German control were all below the action level.

Samples were "first catch" samples, meaning the water had sat in contact with household plumbing for six or more hours, according to Maj. Mark Smallwood, BEF commander. First catch samples are required because the source of lead in drinking water is usually the household plumbing. Water sitting in contact with lead solder or brass fittings can potentially leach lead over time. Annual testing of water wells feeding Spangdahlem Air Base shows that the water is free of lead, so the logical source of lead is the plumbing or faucet fixtures in homes.

"The levels of lead we found in the drinking water are hazardous only when water is consumed over an extended period of time," Smallwood said. "However, when tests show that the level of lead in household water is above the action level it is advisable, especially if there are young children in the home, to reduce the lead level in the tap water as much as possible."

Minimizing the amount of lead in water is as simple as letting your tap run to flush out stagnant water, Smallwood added.

"We've sampled water from the faucets after letting it run until reaching its coldest temperature. The results show that this is an extremely effective method for eliminating the higher concentrations of lead that occur when the water has not been run for several hours. Depending on how much water is being used in the building, this could be as short as five seconds or as long as two minutes," Smallwood said.

An additional precaution is to only use water from the cold tap for drinking, cooking and especially for preparing baby formula. Hot water dissolves lead faster than cold water. Therefore, if lead is present in the plumbing, hot water is likely to contain higher levels of lead.

Some commercially available water filters are 99 percent effective at removing lead from water, and may be used by residents who wish to achieve an additional measure of protection. The National Sanitation Foundation verifies the effectiveness of various brands of water filters at www.nsf.org.

Speeding deterrence

The Eifel military community is reminded that German traffic violations are punishable under German law, not the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Therefore, German authorities retain exclusive jurisdiction to take the appropriate actions for speeding violations.

Also, according to USAFE regulations, speeders can be penalized 3-6 points for each violation. At 12 points, violators lose their base driving privileges. Call the 52nd Security Forces Squadron at 452-6666 for more information.

Driving lights

People should only drive with their fog lights on when weather conditions dictate the need. They should not be used when conditions are clear. Call the 52nd Fighter Wing Safety office at 452-7233 for details.

Bill payments

The government travel card offers a split disbursement feature allowing members to designate a specific dollar amount from the proceeds of a travel voucher to be sent directly to Bank of America to pay the GTC balance.

Members can also request interim monthly payments to be sent to Bank of America when on extended TDYs greater than 45 days.

To take advantage of this feature, check the split disbursement block and list the amount to be sent on the travel voucher.

Three major accidents cost drivers' vehicles, possibly driving privileges

By Tech. Sgt. Warren Moore
52nd Security Forces Squadron

There were three major accidents in the past week involving members of Team Eifel.

The first involved a borrowed 1990 Honda, which was driven too fast in the fog. The driver didn't see a stop sign in time to brake safely. When the driver hit the brakes, the car's wheels locked up and the vehicle slid through an intersection and ending up in a ditch. The car is considered a total loss.

The second accident involved a 2000 Volvo on the B-51 near Pruem. The driver of the Volvo swerved to the right trying to avoid an accident between a semi-tractor and a German-owned car. The driver was able to miss both the semi and the car, but was unable to avoid hitting a guardrail. The operator of the German car received leg and chest injuries from the accident with the semi and was transported to the Bitburg Krankenhaus.

The third accident occurred on the B-50 near Albmühle. Driving too fast for conditions and alcohol contributed to this accident involving a 1997 Oldsmobile. The driver lost control of the car while attempting to negotiate a corner. The car came to rest on its roof.

The driver was administered, and failed, a breath test by Polizei. The driver was taken to the Bitburg Krankenhaus where a German doctor administered a blood test. The driver was then released to security forces and apprehended for suspicion of drunken driving.

A hit and run accident may result in the loss of an American driver's license for two and one-half years. The Leaves changing colors during autumn in Germany may catch the eye, but wet and decaying leaves on the road can be slick and cause vehicle accidents. Drivers are advised to adjust driving speeds according to road and weather conditions to avoid dangerous driving situations.

Senior Airman Jennifer Lindsey

American failed to report the accident.

In addition, there were nine minor accidents:

■ One accident was caused by "speed too fast for conditions."

■ Three accidents were in parking lots (dining hall, Bitburg BX, etc.).

Challenge

■ Fitness Challenge — a physically demanding 1.1-mile run punctuated with 21 gut-wrenching obstacles. Four-man teams compete in the Fitness Challenge.

■ Pistol Competition — a fast-paced timed course of fire on a computer-driven firing range, which features pop-up and steel-plate targets, representing friend or foe, hostage, no-shoot and interactive targets.

■ Combat Rifle — a day and night, eight-person M-16 rifle marksmanship competition. During the night firing phase, defenders use night vision equipment to locate and engage pop-up targets.

■ Combat Weapons — a combined fire team field exercise. In this event, fire teams consisting of an M-16 rifleman, an M-60 machine gun team and an M-203 grenadier engage targets while traversing a cross-country field of fire. Each team engage targets up to 800 meters (2,900 feet) away while contending with rugged terrain and booby traps.

■ Sadler Cup — a nighttime tactical exercise. This event, considered the toughest of Defender Challenge, requires teams to plan and execute a challenging tactical operation on short notice. Detailed planning, tactical know-how and strong leadership are necessary to successfully tackle this event. The event is named after Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Sadler, a pioneer director of security forces.

■ Base Response — a new event that recognizes the dual-role mission of Air Force Security Forces, who are experts in both base defense and traditional policing skills.

■ Chief's Challenge — the only Defender Challenge event for individual competitors. This event features one individual from each team in a grueling, head-to-head obstacle course run. (Localized Air Force Print News article) even low-level exposures to lead can be a health risk, particularly to children under six and pregnant women. This is because lead can be harmful to the developing brain and nervous system.

Government officials strive to keep lead exposures as low as possible. This is evident in efforts made in recent years to eliminate leaded gasoline, lead in house paint and lead in plumbing solder. Similarly, the installation will be evaluating various measures to reduce the amount of lead present in the drinking water.

A-10 squadron meets Al Jaber challenge

By Tech. Sgt. Darrell Brewer
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Experience with Operation Allied Force and other European contingencies is proving valuable for Spangdahlem members deployed to Al Jaber, Kuwait, as part of Air Expeditionary Force 9.

"It's obvious they (Spangdahlem Air Base members) are professionals and have a lot of experience with contingency operations under NATO," said Col. Timothy B. Vigil, 332nd Expeditionary Group commander at Al Jaber. "They bring a different experience level from ACC (Air Combat Command) units."

The 120 members of the 81st Expeditionary Fighter Squadron and 71 troops from various Spangdahlem AB units such as the 52nd Component Repair Squadron, 52nd Equipment Maintenance Squadron and 52nd Supply Squadron, who deployed to Kuwait in August with twelve A-10 aircraft, are slated to return home in December.

Since arriving, "our folks have proven themselves more than ready," said Lt. Col. John Costa, 81st Expeditionary Fighter Squadron commander.

Despite their high experience level, Spangdahlem members still had to work hard to quickly get up to speed in the desert environment.

"There is a big difference between Spang and here," Costa said. "Spang is a training environment. Al Jaber is a contingency environment where you are extremely focused on a specific type of mission. We are here to do CSAR (combat search and rescue) and anti-armor (missions).

"The routine is not 'we need four days to prepare for something.' We do it in a day."

Getting into the groove of the fast-paced routine wasn't easy.

"The first couple of weeks were pretty hectic," said Master Sgt. Thomas Hoag, first sergeant for all the Spangdahlem members deployed to Al Jaber. "At first, we were working about 14 to 16 hours a day. Now, we're pretty much in a smooth period. We're actually off 12-hour shifts and have most people working about 10-hour shifts."

Spangdahlem members got a good feel of what the workload was like immediately after arriving. Hoag said some people didn't even make it through the in-processing line before they were out on the flightline to prepare for the next day's aircraft arrivals.

While operations are running smoothly now, Spangdahlem members still face challenges, the biggest of which is the heat. In addition to the effect of the heat on members themselves, there's been a big impact on the equipment.

Airman 1st Class Kyle Truelson, 81st Expeditionary Fighter Squadron crew chief, helps Col. Timothy Vigil, 332nd Air Expeditionary Group commander, following a sortie in one of the 81st EFS's A-10s.

"The airplanes are designed to operate in lower temperatures," Costa said. "The higher the heat, the worse the airplane performs. We're operating right on the margins."

With winter quickly approaching, however, desert temperatures, while still high, are becoming a lot lower than the 130-plus degrees deployed members experienced when they first arrived.

"(One day recently) it was just below 100 degrees and when we were walking outside we were thinking it was a little bit nippy outside," Costa said. "It's going to be surprising to go back to Spang (where the temperatures are significantly lower)."

Despite the high temperatures and busy schedule, morale has been high, Costa said.

"They're focused," Costa said. "They're working hard, playing hard and enjoying themselves . . . not as much as they would back home, but they are enjoying themselves as much as the situation allows."

While there's no exact date for when Spangdahlem members will actually fly home, Costa said his goal is to try to get everyone home in early December.

"My job is to make sure everybody that came here goes back with us," Costa said. "There's light at the end of the tunnel and it's not just a train coming."

After returning home from the 90-day deployment, the 81st FS will be able to add another notch to its experience belt.

'Letters from the Front' continue raising troop morale

WASHINGTON — The Defense Commissary Agency is once again teaming with the producers of a popular show touring U.S. military bases to ramp up support for a holiday letter writing campaign.

Producers of the show, "Letters from the Front: World War II," which has been touring overseas military bases for three years, came up with the idea of a letter-writing contest after their contact with American troops.

Organizers said they were, "struck by the feeling of loneliness and estrangement expressed by many of those we met during our travels."

The contest runs through Nov. 11. Letters must be between 100 and 150 words long and begin with, "Dear Service Member, I just want to say thanks for . . ."

Official entry forms can be picked up from displays in commissary stores, and letters can be mailed or returned to the commissary displays.

Visit the contest Web site at www.letters-from-the-front.com/- (no hyphen) contest2.htm for information, complete rules and down-loadable entry forms.

Prizes will be awarded in three age groups: under 12, 12-18 and over 19. The two grand-prize winners under 19 will receive $3,000 scholarships; the adult grand-prize winner will receive a $3,000 computer system. Local prizes will also be awarded for winning entries returned through the commissaries.

After the contest ends, the letters are forwarded to U.S. servicemembers serving overseas.

American troops received thousands of letters in 1999 through the contest, organizers said.

"My entire platoon . . . read your letter," wrote back one soldier from Camp Bondsteel, Kosovo. "It changed our outlook and brightened our day."

A noncommissioned officer stationed on Korea's demilitarized zone wrote to the organizers and called the contest a good idea because, "not only does it lift a soldier's spirits . . . so far from home, but it gets the next generation to take an interest in the people defending their country." Area Defense Counsel protects airmen rights

By Staff Sgt. Stacy Garnes
Area Defense Counsel

In the myriad of military acronyms, ADC is one every active-duty member should know because the Area Defense Counsel defends airmen facing military justice or other adverse actions.

Members accused of a crime or who are under investigation for misconduct should call the ADC for free, confidential legal-defense services. Air Force defense counsels strive to protect individual rights and ensure independent, aggressive representation of its servicemembers.

The ADC isn't a wing unit, but rather an independent office on base. Therefore, it's not subordinate to the base command nor the major command. This separate chain of command ensures ADCs are able to work for your best interests, without pressure from anyone on base.

Area Defense Counsel members handle a number of issues, including letters of reprimand, administrative separations, nonjudicial punishment and courts-martial.

Military members' rights are paramount to the ADC.

Senior Airman Jennifer Lindsey

Staff Sgt. Stacy Garnes and Capt. Laureen Jones, base Area Defense Counsel, reference a law book for information for a case.

People suspected of committing crimes have the right to remain silent and the right to an attorney. Counsel members suggest the accused invoke these rights. Invoking either of these rights isn't an admission of guilt and can't be used against the accused.

Remember, too, members assigned to the ADC are the only people in the Air Force, other than chaplains, who have an absolute privilege that protects confidential communications.

Area Defense Counsel attorneys are experienced, licensed members of at least one bar or association of lawyers from a particular state. In addition to being qualified as trial attorneys, ADC members are also certified to defend servicemembers' rights. With a background in both prosecution and defense work, counsel members often anticipate what a commander might do or what type of punishment the legal office might recommend in a given situation.

The Air Force was the first service to have a separate defense program, establishing the ADC program in 1974. In 1999, it celebrates its 25th year of confidential, independent representation. At Spangdahlem, the ADC represent hundreds of clients annually.

Active-duty members should call the ADC at 452-6607 when facing criminal or adverse actions or for more information about individual rights.

Child development center receives reaccreditation

By Carolyn Borkhuis
52nd Services Squadron
Marketing and Publicity

The Spangdahlem child development center recently received re-accreditation by the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

This recognition has been achieved by about 7 percent of early childhood programs nationwide — some 7,448 programs as of June 2000, serving 684,103 children.

"We're excited to continue this recognition along with other Air Force centers," said Yolanda Castro, center training and curriculum specialist. Our staff works very hard. We're proud to say it's not just what happens for one day, as a quality program, we do this every day."

Programs seeking accreditation undergo an intensive self-study, collecting information from parents, teachers, administrators and class-room observations.

They receive an on-site visit, conducted by early childhood professionals especially trained by the NAEYC, to validate their self-study results.

A team of national experts then independently reviews this information and either grants or defers accreditation. When awarded, accreditation is valid for three years.

"The heart of NAEYC accreditation focuses on the child's experience," said Laura Goldthwait, base CDC program director. "The process carefully considers all aspects of a program, including interactions with children and families, curriculum, health and safety, staffing, staff qualifications and development, administration, physical environment, nutrition and food service, and evaluation.

"The greatest emphasis is on the children's relationships with the staff and how the program helps each child grow and learn intellectually, physically, socially and emotionally," Goldthwait said.

Research supports the value of children using NAEYC accredited programs. Children's language and social skills especially benefit from the better quality found in these centers.

"These are critical areas for children's success in school as well as in life," Goldthwait said.

The Spangdahlem child development center is a part of the 52nd Services Squadron Family Member Support Flight. It serves 162 full-time children, ranging in age from 6 weeks to 5 years old and 24 part-day enrichment children.

The center continues to display the NAEYC torch — the sign of NAEYC accreditation and a sign of the center's commitment to child care excellence.

Bundeswehr Big Band swings Trier

By Iris Reiff

52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs

"Barmherzige Brueder von Maria Hilf," the hospital in Trier, celebrates its 150th anniversary by hosting the German Bundeswehr Big Band Wednesday.

The highlight, a welfare concert, takes place in the Trier Europa Halle. The professional military band, known as Europe's most popular big band, follows the Glenn Miller style.

Led by German Lt. Col. Robert Kuckertz since 1991, the band presently has 23 professional musicians, all of whom are all soloists.

From 1981-85, Kuckertz studied classical music in Duesseldorf. After finishing his studies, he temporarily lived in Los Angeles where he was a student of Leonard Bernstein.

Today the band is composed of five saxophone players, four trumpet players, four trombone players and a rhythm group.

When in Trier, the Bundeswehr Big Band entertains with a combination of swing, dixie, rock 'n' roll and popular music, all presented in a modern way during a high-tech show. Throughout the concert, all members of the group perform solos.

Another highlight of the evening features a solo performance by Clare Amakumbi, a 12-year professional musician.

All proceeds from the welfare concert go toward the "Association for Mutual Psychiatry of Rheinland-Pfalz."

Jason Moss, Bitburg Barons No. 19, powers through the Aviano Saints defense in the fourth quarter of Saturday's Baron win at Bitburg High School.

Barons earn return shot at title

Bitburg team to battle Spartans for Division II championship

By Rik Carr
Bitburg High Barons coach

Bitburg found themselves in an unfamiliar predicament with only eight minutes remaining in the first divisional playoff game Saturday. They were losing by three points.

The undefeated Division II North champions struck twice in the final eight-minute span to beat the Aviano Saints 24-14 and advance to the championship game next weekend. It was the first time this season the Barons had to come from behind to win.

While it took a while for the offense to come around, steady defense denied a rushing score for the sixth consecutive game.

Jason Moss put the Barons on the board first on a 50-yard, nine-play drive that ended with an end-around sweep for a 1-yard touchdown. Point-after try holder Charlie Pierce alertly turned a bad snap on the ensuing PAT into a two-point conversion by tossing a strike to Josh Blake.

Aviano spoiled the Barons hope of taking an 8-0 lead into the half on a late second quarter TD and cutting the lead to one.

The Barons started the second half with an eight-play drive that stalled on the Saints 10-yard line. Nick Johnson nailed a 27-yard field goal. That score put the Barons up 11-7 going into the fourth quarter.

Aviano answered by putting together an 80-yard drive on three Baron penalties, each on a third and long. The Saints took advantage of the miscues and scored again on a 5-yard TD pass.

The Saints resorted to an on-side kick following the score, a play Aviano had used with much success during the regular season. Anticipating the play, Bitburg put in their hands return team. Billy Freeland returned the poor kick 14 yards to the Saints 48-yard line. Ten plays later, Freeland drove into the end zone for the go-ahead score and an 18-14 Baron lead.

Bitburg's special teams and defense went to work, first pinning the Saints on their own 10-yard line on the ensuing kickoff. The defense then held Aviano to three and out.

With time dwindling, Moss, Pierce and Johnson keep to the ground game hoping to run out the clock. Instead, Johnson scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak to put the game out of reach for the Saints and seal a return trip to the Division II Championship game.

The championship takes place at 1 p.m. Nov. 11 at the Bitburg High School field against rival Supreme Allied Powers Europe Spartans. The Barons (6-0) again face SHAPE (5-1). In the Division II conference championship game two weeks ago, Bitburg handed SHAPE its only loss of the season 21-6.

Unfortunately, Bitburg goes into the final game without offensive and defensive player Kenny Friend, a four-year player and senior. Friend broke his leg early in the first quarter while blocking on a pass play to Freeland. Senior Adam Pickett and junior Matt Holas replace the void left by Friend.
